MARKET SUMMARY

INDIA

- The Indian ship recycling market experienced a slight slowdown this week as the strengthening U.S. dollar has made purchases more expensive for local buyers, resulting in somewhat softer buying interest compared to the previous week.

- However, the limited availability of incoming vessels has helped support overall sentiment, with recyclers still showing interest due to the relatively low supply of tonnage in the market.

BANGLADESH

- Activity in the Bangladeshi ship recycling market improved this week, with pricing levels moving higher amid healthy demand from local buyers.

- Market sentiment was further supported by reports of a recent vessel concluded at notably strong levels by a Chinese seller, reportedly close to the USD 440 mark, highlighting the willingness of recyclers to secure available tonnage.

- With buyers remaining active and pricing firming, the overall market direction appears to have strengthened compared to the previous week.

PAKISTAN

- The Pakistani ship recycling market remained largely unchanged from the previous week, with activity continuing to be subdued.

- Market participants are closely monitoring ongoing geopolitical tensions and the evolving war situation, which has contributed to a cautious and somewhat nervous sentiment among buyers.

- In addition, the lack of available tonnage being offered to local recyclers has resulted in minimal movement in the market, with stakeholders largely adopting a wait-and-watch approach.

TURKIYE

- The Turkish ship recycling market remained steady this week, with no significant changes observed in underlying market dynamics.
- Despite expectations in the previous week that increasing numbers of candidate vessels could place downward pressure on pricing, no such movement has materialized so far.
- As a result, the market remains largely unchanged, with any potential shifts in pricing or activity likely to emerge in the coming week.
