Highlights of the week

EID MUBARAK

We'd like to extend our warmest Eid greetings to our readers. May this auspicious occasion bring you joy, peace, and prosperity. Eid Mubarak!

Ship recycling markets in four major destinations are experiencing varying trends. India's market is on the rise, with a 10-15 USD increase in prices, mainly due to higher local steel prices, and this trend is expected to persist. Conversely, Bangladesh faces a market softening, attributed to upcoming festivities and holidays, alongside LC issues and reduced demand for local steel scrap, leading to fewer serious offers from recyclers and a potential further decline due to the Taka's weakening. Pakistan sees a deceleration in market activity as Ramadan and Eid holidays approach, with recyclers hesitant to close deals, a situation echoed in Turkey, which has entered a period of notable inactivity due to Ramadan and holiday observances. These developments underscore the complex interplay of local factors and global market dynamics affecting the ship recycling industry.

Ship recycling has hit its lowest level in 20 years, influenced by market shocks, high demand, and small orderbooks, per BIMCO's latest report. In Q1 2024, only two million deadweight tonnes of ship capacity were scrapped, continuing a trend of low recycling rates not seen since before the 2008 financial crisis. Contributing factors include extended sailing distances due to security concerns in the Red Sea, sanctions on Russian exports, and changes in consumer behavior during the COVID pandemic. Despite the current downturn, BIMCO anticipates a rebound in recycling rates due to upcoming newbuild deliveries in the container sector and expected increases in the tanker sector, projecting a significant rise in ship recycling from 2023 to 2033.

Oil prices have continued to rise, poised for a second consecutive week of gains, bolstered by geopolitical unrest in the Middle East, worries about dwindling supplies, and anticipation of demand increases alongside economic recovery.

Türkiye

Market experiences unprecedented calmness amid Ramadan celebrations.

- The Turkish market went through a notably quiet phase, with activity nearly nonexistent and hardly any movements recorded. This lack of activity can be attributed to the Ramadan festivities and holiday period, which typically sees reduced operations.

- Turkish Lira has begun to recover after the opposition's electoral victory, with experts forecasting that the positive election results will stimulate greater capital inflows, strengthening the currency. The orderly execution of the elections and the market's favorable reception to current economic strategies were identified as critical contributors.
