Highlights of the week

Ship recycling markets across South Asia and Türkiye remained quiet overall, though some regions are showing early signs of recovery. Sentiment is still cautious, but improving fundamentals are beginning to support a gradual return of interest. In India, the market has shown modest improvement this week, mainly supported by rising local steel prices. Buyer interest is gradually returning, though overall sentiment remains cautious as participants wait to see if the trend holds. In Bangladesh, only a few HKC-compliant yards are active, and they remain selective in their approach. With limited competition, activity is progressing slowly. In Pakistan, the market remains low and quiet, with no transactions reported. Weak demand and softening prices continue to hold buyers back. In Türkiye, the market is subdued due to the seasonal slowdown. Activity remains limited, and while demand is weak, prices have remained stable.

As global steelmakers move toward cleaner, low-emission production, demand for scrap is expected to rise steadily. Exporting countries may begin to retain more material for domestic use, which could tighten supply in international markets over time.

India

The market sentiment shows early signs of improvement, but outlook remains cautiously optimistic

- The local market has started showing signs of improvement this week, primarily driven by the significant recovery in iron ore prices over the past few weeks. HMS prices have also seen a slight upward trend, adding to the positive sentiment.

- Buyer interest is gradually picking up. In the local market, increased steel prices are prompting buyers to reconsider vessel purchases, reflecting a growing sense of optimism despite the broader market slump.

- While these are encouraging signs, it remains to be seen how much further the market will improve. The recent uplift offers hope, but sustained activity will depend on continued price stability and buyer confidence in the coming days.

Bangladesh

The market shows early movement, but stronger momentum still awaited.

- Buyers are slowly returning to the market after a prolonged period of inactivity. However, only a few HKC-compliant yards are currently in a position to purchase vessels, and they are approaching the market with caution.

- Since only a few HKC-compliant yards are currently able to purchase vessels, and with little to no competition in the market, these yards are not showing much urgency or aggressive pricing. They are approaching deals cautiously, confident in their position as the only active buyers.

- While interest has returned, activity remains measured, and a broader pickup will depend on how buyer sentiment evolves in the near term.

Pakistan

The market is weak with limited activity and cautious participation.

- The market remains low and largely unchanged this week, with no reported transactions and limited activity. Prices continue to soften, and buyers are holding back amid weak sentiment and subdued demand.

- Whether due to the absence of HKC-compliant yards or a cautious wait-and-watch stance from buyers anticipating further price corrections, the market continues to see limited interest and remains largely inactive for now.

- On the economic front, Pakistan recorded USD 26.7 billion in external borrowings last year, marking a record high and deepening the country's reliance on international creditors amidst ongoing fiscal challenges.

Türkiye

The market continues to exhibit subdued momentum, as slow summer activity persists across the region.

- Both recycling capacity and buying interest remain limited, reflecting a broader seasonal slowdown. Despite muted demand, pricing levels have held steady, with no significant shifts observed in recent weeks.

- On the economic front, Türkiye is now anticipating potential interest rate relief, which could improve investor sentiment and gradually support broader industrial and financial activity in the months ahead.
