MARKET SUMMARY

INDIA

- The market continues to remain subdued, with little to no positive momentum. Activity levels are low, and overall sentiment stays weak amid persistently poor fundamentals.
- Although the exchange rate has shown some improvement, it has not yet translated into firmer vessel prices, which continue to stagnate.
- A few recyclers who had purchased vessels at lower acquisition levels are now able to offer materials at reduced selling prices, putting additional strain on others operating at normal cost levels.

BANGLADESH

- The market in Bangladesh has softened further, and this downward trend may become more evident in the pricing of the coming week. Local scrap prices remain at low levels, with very little movement seen across categories.
- Despite the weak sentiment, buyer interest persists, primarily due to the limited availability of tonnage in the market. Buyers continue to show stronger inclination toward tankers and bulkers, which remain their preferred options under current conditions.

PAKISTAN

- The market remains largely stagnant with a slightly negative tone as vessel prices continue to decline. The full impact of this downward trend may become more visible in the coming weeks.
- Demand is quite limited, with only two or three active buyers currently capable of making purchases.
- Market participants are also closely watching the foreign exchange situation, which is expected to influence overall stability and buying interest in the days ahead.

TURKIYE

- The Turkish market has shown slight improvement this week, with local scrap prices rising by around USD 3. Import levels remain stable, and vessel prices have also recorded a modest increase.

- This marks a gradual strengthening in overall market sentiment after a relatively quiet period.
