MARKET SUMMARY

INDIA

- The market showed a marginal improvement during the week, though buying activity remained slow as fast USD/INR movements continued to affect sentiment and limit pricing confidence.
- Developments surrounding Venezuela added to uncertainty, as tighter enforcement on sanctioned oil movements raised questions over tanker demand, charter rates, and the potential impact on global tonnage availability.
- With limited clarity on how these factors may evolve, overall sentiment remained cautious and the market remained in a wait-and-watch mode.

BANGLADESH

- The market remained weak during the week, with limited buyer participation amid a lack of local demand.
- Political conditions continued to weigh on sentiment, creating uncertainty and delaying fresh buying decisions.
- While the market is under pressure, it remains too early to confirm any price correction, and participants are maintaining a wait-and-watch approach.

PAKISTAN

- Ship recycling prices remained largely unchanged during the week, with the market continuing to move in line with previous levels and without any meaningful shift in sentiment.
- Buying interest and activity remained limited, offering little indication of momentum or near-term improvement.
- In the absence of new drivers, the market continued to lack direction, maintaining a flat and subdued tone.

TURKIYE

- Import prices softened slightly during the week, while local pricing levels remained largely unchanged.
- Despite some movement on the import side, overall sentiment showed no material shift, with market participants maintaining existing positions.
- Activity levels continued without notable change, and the market remained subdued, reflecting its typically low-volatility nature.
