MARKET SUMMARY

INDIA

- The Indian ship recycling market remained subdued during the week, with weak local demand for end products continuing to weigh on overall sentiment.
- Local steel prices have shown some stability; however, current levels are expected to be temporary as demand for end products remains weak.
- Market activity may soften further in the coming weeks as weak domestic demand for end products is expected to continue limiting market momentum.
- Two Indian recycling yards have been recommended for inclusion in the EU List. Priya Blue was not included in the latest recommendations; however, there is optimism that the facility may be considered in the next round.

BANGLADESH

- The Bangladeshi ship recycling market remained firm during the week, with buyers continuing to show strong interest in acquiring additional vessels.
- Local market activity remained relatively subdued; however, buyer appetite for recycling candidates continued to be healthy.
- Prices remained firm, supported by sustained purchasing interest despite limited momentum in the local market.

PAKISTAN

- The Pakistani ship recycling market remained buoyant during the week, with buyers actively seeking suitable recycling candidates.
- Mid-sized vessels in the 7,000–10,000 LDT range continue to be the most preferred among local buyers.
- While Pakistani buyers remain unable to match the pricing levels offered by Bangladesh, market sentiment remains optimistic.
- Confidence is supported by limited steel availability, as reduced supplies from Iran are expected to provide support to the local recycling market.
- However, concerns are growing over the broader economic outlook, as a sharp increase in fuel prices over the past 8–10 days is expected to fuel inflation and could weigh on market sentiment in the near term.

TURKIYE

- The Turkish recycling market recorded a modest positive correction, with both imported and local steel prices increasing by approximately USD 4–5 per tonne.
- Despite firmer steel values, vessel prices remained unchanged as buyers continued to maintain a cautious approach.
- Overall sentiment improved slightly, although the increase in steel prices has not yet translated into stronger vessel pricing.
